Code of Ethics for research publications submitted for consideration for publication

- 1. Submissions – Authors may not submit the same manuscript to two or more journals at the same time. Only if one journal rejects a manuscript may an author submit it to another journal.
- 2. Authorship – Only researchers who have made a substantial contribution to the research report submitted for publication may be acknowledged as authors. The individual who has made the most substantial contribution is listed first. Other more incidental contributions (e.g. statistical analysis, clerical work) may be acknowledged in footnotes or in the introduction of the article.
- 3. Copyright – Once an article has been accepted, the rights on the published article are transferred to the publishing organisation; this is done to protect authors and publishers from misuse of copyright material. No article will be published before the author's signed copyright transfer has been received by the editorial office. Contributors themselves must obtain copyright clearance on illustrations, figures, photos, musical examples or lengthy quotes used in their manuscripts. In the case of recorded audio-visual material of compositions and other forms of creative scholarly enquiry published as appended CDs and DVDs to the journal, the author is requested to sign a licence to publish the work.
- 4. Previously published articles – If a manuscript has already been published in another journal or publication, an author may not submit it for consideration elsewhere. Permissible exceptions are
 - (a) if the work has been published in a publication with limited circulation or availability (such as a government agency report) or
 - (b) it has been published in an abstracted form (e.g. convention proceedings).Any such previous publication should in any event be indicated and referenced in the manuscript, and the editor should be informed of the prior publication.
- 5. Publication in a series – Researchers working on large-scale or long-term programmes or projects may publish their results from time to time as significant portions of their projects are completed. It is also permissible to submit articles in which a single investigation has been broken up into separate manuscripts submitted for publication as a series. It is essential that authors who wish to present their research findings in a sequence of articles inform the editor accordingly.

NB: Any violation of this Code of Ethics will lead to the immediate rejection of the article.
